What About Accountability?

PCFSA's operations are administered by an Executive Management Team and are overseen by a volunteer Board of Directors comprising members of the community.

Professionally trained counselling staff includes social workers, counsellors and child, youth and family care workers.

Counselling staff members are professionally qualified and/or may also be registered with:

- Board of Registration for Social Workers
- Canadian Counselling Association or BC Association of Clinical Counsellors
- Registered Art Therapists
- Child and Youth Care Association of BC

To fulfill its commitment to high levels of effectiveness, efficiency and satisfaction, Pacific Centre Family Services Association seeks feedback from a range of stakeholders including program participants, community partners, staff and funders.

PCFSA's Code of Ethics

All staff and PCFSA agents* must understand and apply the Code of Ethics as a guide to their behavior in work and work-related activities. Staff members hold an influential position as role models for their program participants and as representatives of the Centre. Therefore, the behavior of staff and agents must be ethical, respectful, and competent at all times. Violation of these standards has the potential to seriously damage relationships with the program participants and may be grounds for dismissal.

*PCFSA agent - Refers to any person involved in the Centre who interacts with any program participant or their family, and shall include (but not be limited to) all paid employees, practicum students and volunteers.

Rights of youth and children

The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) is the world's most signed Convention. It is designed to protect the lives and dignity of children and youth (anyone under age the age of 18). It outlines the minimum standards for the healthy development of children and youth.

What are child and youth rights?

There are 54 articles and 2 optional protocols in the Convention that outlines the rights of children and youth and the obligations of adults and government.

You don't have to memorize all the different rights in order to understand them. A simple way to determine what rights children and youth have and how to exercise the rights is to know the 4 guiding principles:

1. Non-discrimination. These rights are for all children. Children and youth have the right to be treated without discrimination and have the right to be who they are.
2. Right to life, survival and development. Children and youth have a right to the basic things to live, survive, and develop.
3. Best interests of the child. Always ask yourself "Is the decision I'm making good for kids?"
4. Engaging children and youth. Children and youth need to participate and have their views considered when decisions are being made that affect them.

Our organization cares about the rights of children and youth.

We show this through our range of services that engage and serve children and youth to help them fulfill their potential.
